Biographical Note

Edward “Ed” Bliss, Jr. was born on July 30, 1912 to Edward Lydston and May Bortz Bliss in Fuzhou, China. His father was a medical missionary and his mother was a teacher. After graduating from college in 1935, he worked as a print journalist and a news editor for several small newspapers in Columbus, Ohio. Bliss married Lois Arnette on August 26, 1940 with whom he had two children.

In 1943, Bliss was hired by CBS to work the night shift. He was a producer and editor for Edward Murrow from 1945 to 1955. Bliss also served as an assistant to the president of CBS News in 1962 before becoming editor of “CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite” in 1963.

Bliss left CBS News in 1968 to establish the broadcast journalism program at the School of Communication at American University in Washington, D.C. He taught at American University until 1977. After retiring as a full professor, Bliss remained active as a news consultant for stations across the United States.

Bliss wrote Writing News for Broadcast, a journalism textbook first published in 1971. In 1991 he published Now the News: The Story of Broadcast Journalism. Bliss died in Alexandria, Virginia on November 25, 2002.

Scope and Content Note

The majority of this collection relates to Ed Bliss’ research for his book Now the News: The Story of Broadcast Journalism and consists of interviews (1951-1971), manuscripts, newspaper and magazine articles, photographs, scripts (1943-1992), speeches (1941-1993), and transcripts. Featured individuals and topics include Walter Cronkite, elections, Fred Friendly, Charles Kuralt, Edward Murrow, Dan Rather, Lowell Thomas, the United States Congress, and Vietnam. Of note are materials documenting his tenure on the faculty of American University from 1968 until his retirement in 1977. This collection was organized into five series: biographical, topical, originals, Bliss, and audio-visual.

Provenance

The Bliss Papers were donated to American University Archives by Edward Bliss in two installments.

Processing Note

This collection was divided into six series - biographical, topical, originals, Bliss, audio-visual, and CBS News: The Glory Days. Bliss’s original folder titles and arrangement were retained whenever possible. Materials were placed in chronological order with undated materials in the back of the folders. Bliss used cross references in his filing system. Additional references were created when appropriate.

3 linear feet

This series contains Bliss's drafts and notes for his manuscript, "CBS News: The Glory Days." The drafts are anecdotal in nature. Bliss describes the time he writes about as the "halcyon" period of CBS News, 1938 to 1981 (from World War II to when Richard S. Salant retired as CBS's president and Walter Cronkite retired from anchoring). Please note that all photos for "CBS News: The Glory Days" are located in Series 3: Originals under CBS History.
